

Daily Democrat.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY HARNEY, HUGHES & CO.

OFFICE—

South side of Green street, two doors below the Customhouse.

TUESDAY, JULY 4, 1865.

Democratic and Conservative
Candidates—Congressional Election.

First District.....Hon. L. S. Trimble.
Second District.....Hon. B. C. Ritter.
Third District.....Hon. Henry Grider.
Fourth District.....Hon. A. Harding.
Fifth District.....Hon. Robt's Mallory.
Sixth District.....Hon. A. H. Ward.
Seventh District.....Hon. G. S. Shanks.
Eighth District.....Hon. J. Smith Hurt.

— NEWS.

CITY
Agent of the Democrat in Naville, Tenn.

Wm. C. COLLIER, No. 22½ Cherry street, Nashville, is Special Agent for the Daily and Weekly Democrat in Nashville, Tenn. Persons wishing our paper will always find it at his "News Dept," and on sale by the newsboys, upon the arrival of the train.

NO PAPER ON WEDNESDAY.

The Democrat will not be issued on the morning of the 5th.

FOURTH OF JULY.—To-day is the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the fall of Vicksburg, and the fight at Gettysburg. It should be a day made glorious above all other national holidays, and we hope it will be properly observed by everybody. There will, no doubt, be a tremendous crowd at the Fair Grounds to take part in the celebration there. Woodland Garden will be enlivened by a large picnic, given by the Fenian Brotherhood. A picnic party go up the river. The darkies (of whom there are not a few) will have a good time in a grove a short distance from the city. Both theaters will be in full blast, to-night, to say nothing of balls, parties, &c. The military authorities, we believe, intend making some demonstration toward observing the day, but of what character we are unable to learn. We hope that good will prevail everywhere, and that there will be no single disturbance anywhere to mar the happiness or disturb the peace of all who would enjoy the day in an appropriate manner.

HENRY C. BURNETT.—It will be remembered that about the time the rebellion broke out, Henry C. Burnett was a member of Congress, in Washington, representing the first district of Kentucky. He resigned his position and went South, where he represented this State in the rebel Congress until the rebellion was put down. He went to Washington City, and was allowed to return to his home in this State, near Hopkinsville, Ky. Some time ago the Secretary of War issued an order for his arrest, and Lieut. Mat. Wheeler proceeded to Mr. Burnett's residence a few days ago, and arrested him, with further orders to bring him to this city, turn him over to the civil authorities, and have him tried for treason. Mr. Burnett is now in the city awaiting action in his case.

TO THE SOLDIERS.—Major General Logan directs, that the officers and soldiers of the Army of the Tennessee are anxious to observe the 4th of July with fitting ceremonies as the closing day of the great rebellion, but as the interests of the service will not admit of a celebration including the whole army, each brigade and division, under the superintendence of their respective commanding officers, will observe the day in such manner as may seem best in each case. Headquarters Army of the Tennessee will be closed to-day.

DR. T. W. OWINGS is a candidate for the State Senate in the district composed of Bullitt, Hardin, and Meade counties. The doctor was a member of the lower house in the last Legislature. He is well-known in the district, and they can do nothing better than to elect him.

DR. A. dividend of four per cent, free of Government tax, has been declared on the stock and stock liabilities of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, out of the six months' earnings prior to the 1st of July; payable in legal tender notes on and after the 1st of August next.

WE are requested to call the attention of the authorities to the very unpleasant condition of the upper portion of Portland avenue. The stagnant water, if not removed, will breed disease and death. No time should be lost in improving the sanitary condition of this city.

THE patrol guard made a big haul of "stragglers" yesterday morning up town, a number of whom were enlisted in the shovels brigade, for getting drunk. Young men should let whisky alone, and keep out of such scapes.

ON the 5th of July over seven hundred army wagons are to be sold at Nashville, and on the 10th, four thousand serviceable miles, also large quantities of harness and other paraphernalia of an army out of employment.

FOUND.—A bundle of papers containing some money belonging to Sergt. D. S. Crittenden, First Michigan Engineers. He can get them at Major Thurstin's (Paymaster) office, corner Third and Walnut streets.

COURT-MARTIAL.—The only case before the court yesterday was that of Jim Davis, charged with murder and being a guerrilla. It was continued until Thursday, the court having adjourned until that day.

TWENTY-SIXTH, KENTUCKY.—This gallant regiment is at Salsbury, N. C., doing post duty, etc. etc. parley, etc., whom no better soldier and clever general lives, is in command.

ANOTHER lot of negroes left for Dixie yesterday. They have "fought, bled and died" for their country long enough, and are going home to "live and let live." in command.

NOTwithstanding the proclamation of the Mayor, we notice the frequent appearance of dogs on our streets. If it is proper, we know of a person who will kill all he sees.

General Sherman intends paying his boys, in the various camps around the city, a visit to-day. He will be hailed with shouts of joy by his gallant followers.

WE noticed yesterday three arrests by the military guard on Water street, all within about five minutes. One of the unfortunate was of the feminine persuasion.

The Seventy-third Indiana passed through the city yesterday as route for their horses. They have been mustered out of the service.

GEN. SHERMAN'S STAFF.—Gen. Sherman's staff are stopping at the Louisville Hotel.

FOR yesterday afternoon's dispatches see fourth page this morning.

RECEPTION OF MAJ. GEN. W. T. SHERMAN! HIS SPEECH!—THE BANQUET!

OVATION TO THE HERO!

The steamer United States, with Major-General W. T. Sherman and staff, arrived from Cincinnati an early hour yesterday. The news of his arrival spread fast through the city, and ere long there were a large number of people congregated on the wharf to catch a glimpse of the "man of war." A veteran brigade, composed of the 11th Iowa, 13th Indiana and 16th Iowa, all under the command of Brigadier-General Hickenlooper, moved down to the boat about 7 o'clock, and formed two lines along the levee.

Major Tompsett, accompanied by a company in carriages, next made their appearance and presented the gallant chief with the hospitalities of the city, which he modestly accepted. In a few minutes the procession began to move. A brass band led the procession. Next came an open carriage containing the General, Dr. T. S. Bell, Mr. J. D. Osborne, Ballard, followed by Sherman and Judge — of citizens in man's staff and a number of carriages. Then came a full field band, followed by the above mentioned regiments. The procession moved up Fifth street to Walnut and up Walnut to the residence of Mr. Osborne, where the general was made a guest. He had been in the house but a short time, and the procession disbanded, when he was called upon by the crowd for a speech.

He made his appearance, and stated that he was in the hands of the committee and would take pleasure in accommodating them with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

About 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse, with a short speech, at the courthouse, at 1 o'clock. The general rode along the streets in his bare head and returned the salute of everybody he bowed or spoke to him. He did not seem to slight even the little ragged newsboy, who shook him cordially by the hand, nor the private soldier, who approached him with a pleasant countenance, his hat in one hand and his heart in the other. Quite a number of ladies called upon the general during the day, all of whom he seemed pleased to see.

At about 1 o'clock a crowd of about two thousand persons assembled in front of the courthouse,

